Lights of New York

by L. L. STEVENSON

Time to Depart: One of the air raid wardens in Greenwich Village is a young woman somewhat of the Amazon type. The other evening, friend called and informed the warden that a man was prowling around her house in a very suspicious manner.

The warden, ready for her hour of duty and wearing a uniform which included slacks, set out to investi- gate. Sure enough she did find a prowler whom she grabbed as he was about to pry open a window.

The man, though of considerable size, took one glance at the uniform and surrendered quickly. Taking him meekly toward the corner, blowing a police whistle as she did so. When they reached the corner, the street light was burning brightly. Glaring one look at his captor, the culprit exclaimed: "My God, a woman!" and quailed.

Backfire: Shortly after entertaining at the Dutch Treat club's last luncheon for the season, where he impersonated F.D.R., Mrs. F.D.R. and other well-knowns, Dean Murphy encountered the mayor of a small Maine town. The mayor told him of an uncle who was the only Democrat in the village. Murphy, who loves a practical joke, put in a long distance call and in the voices of the within that country. In his judgment Russia is moving toward the "right," which he explains means towards democracy, and "in a sense," capitalism.

Like observations about the general trend in Russia have been made by many a humorist. They have been delayed opening a second front until we are ready. We feel that our shipments of material to Russia have kept them in the fight and that our air attack on Germany has a big influence on the current successes of the Red army. And as for the peace, we feel that all problems should be solved on a basis of international right rather than national self-interest.

We can understand the Russian point of view, and hope to present our point of view as clearly as that in turn may be understood by our ally. The fact that the point of view are not identical is not alarming, so long as both parties maintain an attitude of working out of the problems.

REWARDS FOR RISKS

The American people are keenly anxious to improve the lot of the whole population in the years to follow the war. It is generally admitted that the country's workers need a better chance, less uncertainty about their earnings. The problem has to be studied as to how industry can be made to work and assure the working masses of sufficient earnings to attain an American standard of living.

Very many people think that business wants to great a profit, and that some of these gains should be divided up among its employees. To make our business and industrial system go, it is necessary to allow its owners and managers a profit sufficient to induce them to continue in business. If the profit is very small, there is little inducement to keep on doing business and employing labor. The desire to earn a profit is like the man's desire to watch. It makes the whole thing go.

To keep this system in operation, it is necessary to do something more than pay for the labor and service given by the owners and managers of business. It is necessary also to compensate them for the chances they take in carrying on business and trade. Countless people who have attempted such enterprises have lost their money.

The industries of the country have been built up because people were willing to take risks, and to venture their savings on the chance of business. Many people failed in their attempts to establish enterprises.

It is no reflection on the labor and the heroism of the Russian people in this war to say that the system under which they have been living for the last twenty-five years has not worked out in the manner envisaged by the Bolsheviks. Founding Fathers reported by some of our more enthusiastic literati. Nor is it possible to blame everything on the war. We suspect that the American people still prefer their own system with all its shortcomings, if only because they can speak up and demand improvement where possible.
